YOUR FARM PROBLEM

by Ezra Taft Benson
Secretary of Agriculture
(Part Two)

Any effective solution of today's farm problem must provide methods for reducing our huge stockpile of agricultural commodities and at the same time prevent further burdensome accumulations.

Getting rid of these surpluses is only half of our problem. Even if we were able to bring them down to manageable proportions, we would soon acquire new hoards of wheat, corn, cotton and butter under the existing system of price supports.

We already have approximately $2.5 billions tied up in loans on farm commodities, in addition to an equal amount invested in goods which we own outright—$5 billions in all.

Our present program does not encourage the production shifts which are required to meet the changing market demands for various commodities.

Of course, we could destroy some of our surpluses. Remember the government's fiasco of a few years ago?

Or we might plow under every third row of cotton and kill little pigs. Remember the m-l-u-2930's?

Actually, we would not even consider such wasteful practices.

We are attempting to move surplus food and fiber into foreign markets. World prices, however, are well below the figures at which we acquired these commodities under our price support operations.

This means that we will be forced to take substantial losses on whatever we sell abroad.

At the same time, we must avoid outright dumping, which disrupts normal trade channels and brings down upon us the wrath of other friendly countries.

There are these other alternatives: We can make a real effort to move surpluses out of warehouses and into stomachs by promoting greater public consumption of some commodities. We can push forward in our research programs to uncover new uses for farm goods. We can throw our entire weight behind plans for expanding present foreign markets and finding new outlets overseas.

Such methods, while they will not produce results as quickly as dumping or destroying food, offer a far sounder approach to our basic problems.

Along these lines, I can report that our promotional campaign, undertaken with the meat industry and food stores, is producing real results. We are consuming beef this year at the rate of 75 pounds per person, the highest in our history.

Farm exports have turned upward since July 1, reflecting our emphasis upon expanding trade.

Continued high employment at home, with national income at record levels, means a strong demand for farm goods in the United States.

Our population is growing at a rate of more than 2,000,000 per year, which means that by 1975 there will be 200,000,000 Americans. Our future farm problems may involve questions of shortages, rather than surpluses.

We cannot wait for an expanding population to solve our immediate troubles, however. We need an interim program to encourage shifts to other crops. We must halt further build-ups of government stockpiles now.

Our urgent need is for a price support program which can be adjusted in terms of production and demand. One which will of-

Comm. Agrees School Needs Two Rooms

Two previous issues of the Citizen have published some items of information from the findings of the School Survey Committee. These two previous items contained information as the number of pupils enrolled, anticipated enrollments in future years, method by which building funds could be obtained from the Maine School Building Authority, probable costs of building additions, etc.

The committee, on the basis of its work so far has agreed that the town should as soon as possible add to the Crescent Park School the two rooms contained in the original ten room plan, but which were not built at that time because of lack of funds.

Next Tuesday, Jan. 6th, the Survey Committee meets again. At this and subsequent meetings the committee will fulfill that responsibility delegated to it and make some definite recommendations for action by the town at the annual March meeting.

ACP Program For County Approved

The Agricultural Conservation Program for 1954 has been approved by the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee and will be available to farmers of the county beginning at once. Those who wish to participate in any of the twenty conservation practices of the program can make out their requests for approval any time now according to John H. McKee, chairman of the County Committee.

The chairman states that community committees will not call on farmers to get their requests during the next few weeks but farmers may enroll by calling or either community committees or by coming to the county office. The first enrollment period ends on January 15 and the date for beginning practices under the 1954 program is February 15, Mr. McKee states.

Several new soil and water conservation practices are being offered to Oxford County farmers under the ACP program for 1954, according to Mr. McKee. The chairman states that among these are the following:

1. The use of both fertilizer and lime together with an approved seedling mixture to get the best possible cover of grasses and legumes in apple orchards.

2. The use of lime, fertilizer, and an approved seedling mixture to get a good vegetative cover on land that is suitable for only pasture or hay.

3. The construction of a small pond where from 40 to 200 cubic yards of earth are taken out to provide water for livestock.

4. The establishment of a permanent vegetative cover to protect gullies, dams, ditches, and field borders from erosion.

5. The prevention of stream bank erosion by grading and using rocks to prevent the washing away of good crop soil.

The farmers who wish to get the super or wish to carry out spring seeding and other practices should request approval by January 15 according to the chairman.

Paul Salway who is a pilot at V. A. Tugus, spent the holiday and work with his family.

PROMISE OF THE LAND

One of the world's great problems within man's capacity to solve is that of adequately feeding the people. At many places on the earth's surface it has not been solved. It hasn't been solved in India where famine has stalked throughout the centuries and where teeming millions today are perpetually undernourished. It hasn't been solved in China where chronic hunger has been a miserable burden passed from one generation to the next. And there are other places around the world where it hasn't been solved.

India hasn't at last solved the problem of feeding her millions by adopting Socialism; nor is China's centuries-old hunger going to be assuaged by the phony "land reform" of the Communists. The great food problem of Asia, as elsewhere, can be solved only by vastly increasing productivity on the land. In our free America, industry and science have joined to make our farms the biggest producers and our people the best fed on earth.

Key to Survival

But America alone hasn't the acreage to fill the gap in the world underproduction of food. Nevertheless, our industries are harnessing science to develop an amazing new form of agriculture through which, if it could be applied throughout the world, would ease mankind's age-old struggle for life-giving nourishment. And the most productive field in this scientific pioneering by American industry is that of chemistry. It can be said now with certainty that chemistry literally holds the key to survival in a world whose underfed population continues to grow and grow.

Our big chemical industries have already begun to revolutionize American agriculture. Monsanto, Union Carbide and Carbon, Dow, American Cyanamid, Du Pont, and many others have developed chemicals which in recent years have brought astonishing results in farm productivity. And all these companies agree that they are but on the threshold of an almost unlimited potential for agricultural development.

A Big Truth

Du Pont, one of the biggest, seems to be focusing its vast total resources in the direction of the land and its potential. This one company is spending a substantial portion of its multi-million research budget on agricultural chemistry. It has just published a fascinating booklet entitled "The Story of Farm Chemicals." In it is traced the history of mankind on the land. The story of man in his rise from poverty and want, Du Pont shares. It is the story of his struggle to wrest his food from the soil.

And the booklet points up another truth: "When each man can raise only enough food to feed himself, then all productive effort must go to the raising of food. Thus, a valid parallel of civilization's progress is the extent to which the farmer's productivity permits larger and larger segments of the population to use their skills in other fields."

Productivity Pays Off

How strikingly this truth is brought home as you travel across the Middle East, or India, or the rich Nile valley I saw literally a whole people enslaved to the land because their ancient farming methods produced so little. I lived among similar conditions in China where the tools and techniques of farming are as old and unchanging as the Great Wall and where 85 per cent of the people are placed down to the soil in an attempt to eat. Too few are left to be producing the means of advancing civilization.

In 1950 America was producing very little more than enough foodstuff for herself even though 85 per cent of her people lived on farms. Today, with 12 percent of the population on farms we are much better fed. The remainder have been freed to go to industrial and business centers and produce other goods and services to enrich American life. Our population has

DALE CARNEGIE

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

WILLIAM B. LYLE, JR., 4132 Washington Avenue, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, was building a boat. The framework had been completed, and he was stretching the plywood around the curved surface of the prow when he discovered that a gap existed between the lower surface of the plywood and the framework. Plywood has its limitations for bending, and this was one of them. It simply would not pull down to fit the boat framework.

He had been working on the boat in his spare time, which was usually rather late in the evening, and he was tired. He probably should have been in bed an hour before. He sat down and looked at the situation with thoughts of despair—and worried for half an hour. He visualized having to rebuild the whole front end of the boat and he did not want to spend this time back-tracking.

He stopped and asked himself the question, "Bill Lyle, how big a fool can you be? You know the problem; the plywood won't fit the boat. What are the facts in the case? If the plywood won't fit the boat, you have to make the boat fit the plywood." There was no other solution, so he went to work at the task of changing the framework. Immediately he felt better because he had conquered his worry by deciding on a course of action and acting on the decision.

This case made him think of all the times that he had been in similar situations where there were other small things from day to day causing him to worry.

Now when he has occasion for worry he simply stops a minute and thinks each little worry through. He gathers the facts, analyzes them and decides on a course of action. Then he follows the course of action he believes to be best.

That simple formula has saved him endless worry.

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

Until comparatively recently, as history is measured, the techniques of farming had not changed essentially in centuries. The main asset of the farmer was the strength to do the most arduous kind of hand work for long hours each day. Neither the tools nor the knowledge existed for getting the most out of the soil, nor for protecting the soil against the ravages of man and nature.

The change that has taken place in a generation or two fully deserves the term revolutionary. The aids to better living and to more efficient production that the farmer now has at his disposal would have staggered his grandfather.

These aids are of many kinds, and they reach into every conceivable facet of the agricultural scheme of things. The major farm organizations, for example, such as the Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation, serve to a large extent as the farmers' spokesmen in legislative and political matters, and they also are effective agents in publicizing the thinking and problems of agriculture, as well as in bringing farmers together to discuss and deal with questions of common interest. The national and regional agricultural magazines, some of which have gained huge circulations, provide a mixture of information and entertainment, with the emphasis strongly on the information side. The best of these publications have editorial standards second to none, and they are eminently readable as well as authoritative.

Federal and state governments offer very extensive services to the farmer, on matters of both national and local application. They have in print an almost endless list of pamphlets, dealing with every kind of agricultural operation, down to the most intensely specialized. And the county agent is a fixture in the farm scene.

The soil conservation districts, organized and administered by farmers themselves, have done a great and absolutely necessary work. As late as 1925 there had been little actual study of erosion control, and the problem was urgent. Moreover, each farm was different, presenting individual difficulties. Some way had to be found to place the primary responsibility for soil and water conservation where it belonged and where it could be handled—with farmers and ranchers. The districts have provided for a partnership between the farmer and the public and private agencies involved in the vast conservation program.

Finally, certain industries have made tremendous contributions to better farming in all its ramifications. The fact that these contributions are commercially motivated in no way lessens their value—the industries concerned couldn't have sold their goods and services unless hard-headed, economy-minded consumers had found them well worth the cost. One of these industries is electric power—without minimizing the work of REA or any other government organization, history testifies that the utilities pioneered rural and farm electrification and have been leaders in the movement ever since. The result is that all but a very small percentage of our farmers are users of central station power, or have it available.

Another is the farm equipment industry. The role of the tractor and of the other machines in the agricultural revolution can hardly be exaggerated. The machine has solved the over-riding problem of how to get greater production at a lesser cost. It is, of course, the mainstay of soil and conservation work, with its ability to do in a few hours jobs that would demand the back-breaking work of many men for days or weeks. And, in the view of the agricultural authorities, its importance will continue to increase, as the nation deals with the imminent problem of supporting a swiftly rising population with food and fiber from a farm acreage that is virtually fixed.

LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

How about 1954—and now is the time to look over our shoulder and see how come it didn't turn out in 1953 like our year ago resolution. Where is that extra 50 bucks a month that it looked so easy to put aside. It flew the coop—or did it. Had a little too much fun—maybe—and sometimes a next morning foggy taste.

Huffling down to the bank—and no slips, and pronto—each month could cure a repeat dilemma at the close of 1954. What this country could not get along without is banks. And bankers, of all the people you know, you will find few who assay "way up as high or higher in horse sense and good advice. And right here at the Grove, you take Uncle Joe down at our bank, the latch string is always out—and good advice on tap. There are but few folks you would let hold your gold watch and chain as you look away—aside from the banker. Go on down and see—and listen.

And "looking away"—it takes me back to "I wish I was in de land of cotton, cinnamon seed and sandy bottom, look a-way, a-way in Dixey where buckwheat cakes and good strong butter makes my mouth go flitter flutter, look a-way a-way away in Dixey." And now, with a cold January and February in the offing—I'm torn with concern as to whether it is to be Dixey, and out the window with that 50 buck resolution.

Yours with the low down,
JO BEHRE

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, once again we pause to pay tribute to one of our members, Erwin Hutchinson, who has finished his labors on earth and joined the great Grange above.

Resolved, that in the passing of our Steward and Brother, Round Mountain Grange has lost a loyal and faithful member. His cheery smile and pleasant greetings will be missed by all.

Resolved, that we drapes our charter as a token of respect to his memory; that we unite as one in extending our sympathy to his family; and that these resolutions be spread on our records, a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to the "Bethel Citizen" for publication.

V. A. NEWS LETTER

Myles P. Cronkite, Officer-in-Charge, VA Office, 98 Harlow St., Bangor, this week proposed a New Year's resolution for all GI insurance policy holders—one that will save the veterans money during 1954, and also will help VA administer its vast insurance program more efficiently.

By paying his National Service Life Insurance premiums on a quarterly, semi-annual or annual basis, the veteran cuts down on the number of mailings to the VA's District Office, and also realizes a cash saving amount of his premium payments, VA said.

VA looks for substantial savings in clerical and paper work, due to less frequent postings to each veteran's insurance premium record.

Policy holders with addresses in New England who wish to switch from monthly premium payments to quarterly, semi-annual or annual payments should write to: VA District Office, P. O. Box 8078, Philadelphia 1, Pa., or contact Cronkite's office.

VA advises that the policy holder be sure to include in his letter the number of his GI insurance certificate, so that his account may be identified and VA can advise him promptly the exact amount of premium due, depending on the mode of payment the veteran selects.

Questions and Answers

Q—Through an oversight, I paid my GI insurance premium just before the 31-day grace period expired. But I'm afraid the premium won't reach VA until after the grace period ends. Will my insurance lapse?

A—The postmark date on the envelope is considered as the date on which the premium was paid. So long as the postmark date is within the grace period, you will be protected.

Q—I'd like to convert my GI term insurance to permanent insurance. I have a $10,000 policy. Do I have to convert all of it at the same time?

A—No. You may convert either the entire amount, or any part of it, in multiples of $500 but not less than $1,000. For example, you could convert $5,000 and keep the remaining $5,000 as term insurance.

NOT MUCH TIME LEFT FOR KOREAN GI BILL TRAINING

With deadlines on Korean GI Bill training fast approaching the Veterans Administration answers some questions commonly being asked by veterans with service since the Korean hostilities started. The VA's answers appear below:

Q. For what veterans is August 20, 1954, a cut-off date?

A. For those separated from active service before August 20, 1952.

Q. Must this group of veterans apply for their training before August 20, 1954?

A. They must apply and be in their training course by August 20, 1954.

Q. If the school year starts in September 1954, how can they get under the wire? September is after their cut-off date.

A. They must enter before August 20, 1954, even though it means entering for the term beginning in the spring of 1954.

Q. How about veterans who were separated after August 20, 1952?

A. Those veterans have two years from the date of their separation in which to begin their training.

Q. Does the phrase "Korean vet" mean only those who served in Korea?

A. No. It means those who served anywhere where Korea started. That was June 27, 1950.

Q. Where can further details on Korean veteran training benefits be obtained?

A. At any VA office.

No. 1 Men of the Year

In Baseball

Lou Perini, president of the Braves, whose phenomenal success in transferring his club from Boston to Milwaukee, provided one of the features of the 1953 season, has been awarded executive honors in the annual No. 1 Men of the Year selections by The Sporting News. The baseball newspaper handed its managerial accolade to Casey Stengel of the world's champion Yankees and named Al Rosen, third baseman of the Indians, as the outstanding player.

For the minor leagues, the awards were made to R. W. (Dick) Burnett, president of the Texas League, as the No. 1 executive; Bobby Bragan of Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League as the top manager; Gene Conley, pitcher of Toledo in the American Association, as the standout player, and Carl W. Roth, general manager of Florida, Three-I-League, as the leading executive for the lower classification minors.

Ty Cobb Recalls Great Players of His Day

Major league players of today could be every bit as good as they were 35 or 40 years ago. If they could only apply their talents and capitalise on their opportunities. Ty Cobb relates in The Sporting News, The Hall of Fame outfielder who is regarded as the greatest player in the history of the game, makes a number of interesting observations in the story.

He says the modern players don't go all-out to attain their full potentials and neglect base running, the hit-and-run and the sacrifice, as well as the psychological aspects of the game.

Years ago, Cobb points out, there was no distinction between batters and home run sluggers. All of them know how to take care of themselves on the bases. As an example, he cites Sam (Wahoo) Crawford, who twice won the home run championship and, if he had played in the lively ball era, would have challenged Babe Ruth. Yet, Sam also stole 367 bases in his major league career, including 41 in one season alone.

Short Stuff

The major leagues will have their first real policeman in many years, when Duke Markoff reports to the Philadelphia Phillies next spring. The right-hander, who pitched for Syracuse (International League) in 1953, is a cop in New York during the off-season. A total of 61 night games, a record high for metropolitan New York, will be played by the Yankees, Giants and Dodgers in the coming season. The Dodgers had scheduled 26, the Giants 10 and the Yankees 16.

Park rentals from pro football teams proved a big help this year to the treasuries of several major league baseball clubs. Despite the drop in attendance at Detroit, the Tigers broke even on the year as a result of the money they received from the football Lions for use of Briggs Stadium. The White Sox, Cubs, Athletics, Giants, Pirates and Senators also have pro football clubs as tenants of their parks.

Maury McDermott, the young Red Sox left-hander who was recently traded to the Senators, led all major league hurlers in night game performance last season, winning ten straight without defeat.

The Washington Senators, who were skeptical of the enthusiastic reports of Scout Joe Cambria on Angel Scull, their Negro outfielder in the Cuban Winter League, found encouragement when the Cleveland Indians offered to buy him for $40,000. It is pointed out that the only coach who wasn't fired by Manager Eddie Joost of the A's was his roommate of last season, Wally Moses. Del Wilber of the Red Sox was the No. 1 home run better in a substitute role, knocking four drives out of the lot, reports The Sporting News in a story on pinch-hitter Wilber's total was only one short of the American League mark set by Joe Cronin in 1943.

TODAY'S Meditation

Thursday, December 31

I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. (John 8:12.) Read Corinthians 5:17-21.

WHEN the year ends, we look over the path we have traveled. Voices deep within us call out, "We are your lost opportunities. We are the love and the pity and the kindness you locked within your heart."

At this milestone we also look forward. We try to look ahead into the future. We do not know what it will hold for us of joy or sorrow, friend or foe, success or failure, life or death. We face this challenge of change. As we do so, we need faith and power. We look up. We come to the place where stands the cross on which the Prince of glory died. We see that "Love divine, all loves Excelling." There only do we hear that sure word of forgiveness for past failures. In Christ only can we find power that will hold our spirits strong and steady. In Him is our hope for the future as He has been our salvation in the past.

Prayer

O Lord God, lead us onward into the new year. May Thy hand ever guide us, the Holy Spirit abide with us to strengthen and sustain us. Help us that we waver not on the pathway of the new year. In Thy Son's name we pray. Amen.

Thought For The Day
